

Financial abuse

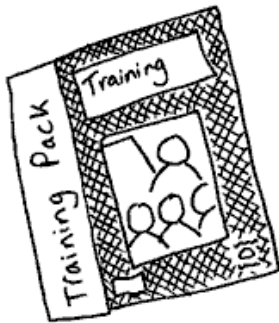

ACTing against abuse

all about people

The Department of Health has given some money to the Ann Craft Trust and BILD to work together for two years.

We want to write a training pack about how to stop financial abuse of people with learning disabilities. The pack will be for advocates, families, staff and people with learning disabilities.

The people who will be working together are Deborah Kitson, Liz Brooks and Sue Thurman.

We have been asking lots of different people about financial abuse.

We have asked people what they think financial abuse means.

We have asked people about their stories about financial abuse.

We have asked people for ideas about what can help to stop financial abuse.

We will be writing a training pack to help keep people safe from financial abuse. The pack will also teach people what to do if you know somebody who is being financially abused.

We will try out our training with lots of different people including people with learning disabilities. We want our training pack to be helpful.

We want to be able to tell people good ways to know when financial abuse is happening and how to stop it.
